COURSE OVERVIEW

The main sources of the national income include foreign direct investment, foreign loans and grants and foreign remittances, which are earned by the people working abroad and exporting goods to foreign countries. Foreign Remittances have very positive impact on the overall economic outlook of any country. It is not just a part of the income of nations; it is a power on which developments run smoothly. Now-a-days remittances have made world economies more dynamic. Pakistan receives and sends remittances to and from various countries and these remittances play an important role in smoothening household consumption as well as socio-economic development of our country. This one-day training will cover various aspects of Foreign Remittances and will also highlight the associated challenges and opportunities.
